

Royal Concertgebouw Orchestra

Based in Amsterdam, the Royal Concertgebouw Orchestra has brought music to life for 137 years. The orchestra is renowned for its unique sound and stylistic versatility.

The Concertgebouw Orchestra has the privilege of working with the most prominent conductors and soloists. It has a close relationship with Klaus Mäkelä, who will commence his tenure as chief conductor in 2027. Riccardo Chailly has been conductor emeritus since 2004, Iván Fischer has been honorary guest conductor since 2021. Her Majesty Queen Máxima is patron of the orchestra.

The orchestra gives around 130 concerts a year, both at home in the Concertgebouw in Amsterdam and in the most prestigious concert halls around the world. This makes the Concertgebouw Orchestra an ambassador for the Netherlands and an indispensable part of its cultural heritage.

The orchestra sees it as its responsibility to pass on the power of symphonic music. The musicians share their knowledge, experience and love of music through the Academy of the Concertgebouw Orchestra and the international youth orchestra Young, while the orchestra trains young conductors in the Ammodo Masterclass and through the Bernard Haitink Associate Conductorship. With innovative concert formats and performances outside the concert hall, the orchestra inspires new listeners.

The Concertgebouw Orchestra derives most of its income from concerts at home and abroad. The orchestra is grateful for the support it receives from its audience, the Dutch Ministry of Education, Culture and Science, the municipality of Amsterdam, global partners ING, booking.com and The Magnum Ice Cream Company, and numerous sponsors, funds and donors worldwide.
